6. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below : $4 \times 5 = 20$

The last, and chiefest danger which I would indicate, is one to which I have already referred—the risk of a failure at the commencement of the enterprise. I must insist on it. A failure at the commencement may easily kill outright the newborn impulse towards a complete vitality, and therefore every precaution should be observed to avoid it. The impulse must not be over-taxed. Let the pace of the first lap be even absurdly slow, but let it be as regular as possible.

And, having once decided to achieve a certain task, achieve it at all costs of tedium and distaste. The gain in self-confidence of having accomplished a tiresome labour is immense.

Finally, in choosing the first occupations of those evening hours, be guided by nothing whatever but your taste and natural inclination.

Questions

- a) What does the author indicate as the last and the chiefest danger ?
 - b) What harm can a “failure at the commencement” cause ?
 - c) What is the ‘gain’ even when something is pursued at the cost of “tedium and distaste” ?
 - d) What should be the guiding factors behind choosing the most important occupation for the evening hours ?
